

Children's playground games and songs in a new media age Children's conference

Showroom Cinema, Sheffield, Tuesday 15th February, 2011

This conference marks the end of a two-year AHRC-funded project which has explored children's playground games and rhymes in a new media age. Children in two primary schools, Christopher Hatton Primary School in London and Montenev Primary School in Sheffield, were involved in research design and data collection throughout the project. Children's Panels were established in both schools and panel members are participating in this conference in order to outline the work they undertook during the project, talk about what they found out and celebrate the creativity and richness of their playground culture.
